

A photograph of three dogs, likely Weimaraners, resting together on a dark surface. The dog in the foreground is a white Weimaraner with its head down. Behind it are two other dogs, one with white and tan patches and another with more tan patches. The background is dark, and the lighting highlights the texture of their fur.

THE HOUND WELFARE FUND

Recognizing that their hounds are the heart of the Iroquois Hunt, trailblazing individuals initiated the innovative practice of providing care for their hounds “after the chase.”

Now, many hunts across the country have followed suit, providing the proper care of the noble hounds after they’ve left the sport.

The Fund accepts tax-deductible donations, 100% of which go directly to the care of the retired Iroquois hounds.
